The Basis of Settlement.

The Virginia Chronicle is informed that the terms of settlement between Superintendent Yerington and the Mechanics' Union require that Clark, the engineer who has caused all the trouble, shall be laid off until a branch of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers can be established in Carson, which will be in a few weeks. The Brotherhood will then act in concert with the Mechanics' Union and compel all engineers to conform to the regulations of the capacity, and concentrating works. two bodies acting together.

"Camping Out."

DONNER LARE, Tuesday A. M.) August 12, 1879.

EDITOR JOURNAL:--Here we are on the beautiful little Donner Lake. It is three miles long by one wide and of a beautiful blue. We left Reno last Monday morning at 5 o'clock and met with no mishaps to speak of, except that there was a tendency of the road to persist in getting lost and when once found of not staying found worth a cent. Despite a few such wanderings we arrived at Truckee at about 2:30, and rested until evening. While at this mountain stown we met a number of politicians who interviewed us after the usual manner. Politics is red hot. Nothing else is thought of but it. Public meetings are held almost nightly. To-morrow evening Kearney will speak to them; of course there is much curiosity to see the ex-drayman who has gained such a notoriety. Truckee is a dull town. Comparatively speaking Rono is very lively. The people fear the proposed railroad change and denounce it, but the railroad company has a way of its own wishes of any town or party. Evening came on and we started for Donner and have been up to this writing camping at the picnic ground, having appropriated the building. Your scribe slept last night 'neath the "starry canister of heaven" as Mrs. Partington says, with a hard ground, irregularities and some blankets under him and was hushed to rest by the moaning of the pines and the howling of the coyotes. Before going to rest we took a boat ride by starlight with Jacob Teeters, to whom we are indebted for many favors. Talk about luxury, why it was fairy-land and I feel as if I had a corner lot, worth $500 a front foot. Five o'clock this morning found us up and bathed in the warm water of the lake, which was very comfortable compared to the real cold air, and with appetites such as we have not had for month. A can of pork and beans on a tin plate just touched the spot and the heavy rains, which in their descent can was scraped clean. Then we again pressed Mr. Teeters into service to show us the site of the DONNER CABINS. A walk of half a mile east of the lake brought us to the melancholy spot. Here we dug up relics-bones of the unfortunate ones who died and were eaten by their famishing companions. A spot was shown us where six were buried in the snow by a tree but were afterward dug up and caten. The stump is in Mr. Teeter's possession. Then the corner of the Reed cabin where Mrs. Reed buried a cup full of beans, and a small piece of bacon and a cup of flour to make a Christmas dinner for her starving children. What mournful thoughts force themselves upon one as he gazes upon the very spot where such scenes were enacted. Hardly recovering from this reverie we came to a tree bearing the marks of an attempt made to cut it down for fuel, by the freezing emaciated snow-bound prisoners. Small among which you are moving. On backs they were that were made by the Place before the Club house powerless enfebled arms, and in desperation and despair the hopeless task was abandoned. The tree lives and in its tigures and costumes, from all the side is the wound thus made. The lands of the West and East. Conground at this place is being panned out spicenous are her Majesty's sentries and many relies found, establishing before the "Main Guard:" and groups in that same scarlet uniform are beyond a doubt their exact location.

Thus perished miserably 43 out of a strolling everywhere, showing party of 80. A mournful interest associates itself with a lake bearing the name of a party which suffered such untold misery. I shall read McGlashan's book, "The Donner Party," with a new zeal now, and will save a relic of human bone taken from the Breen-Keseberg cabin site.

We have thoroughly enjoyed every moment out and are now about to go to Lake Takee to spend a few days. We now plunge into the wilderness to rough it after a manner of our own,

Nothing can well be more enchanting than the landing there in the early Spring, or what we should rather call the late Winter. The among the mountains have been turning dried-up water-courses into raging torrents, and sending the newly tormed waterfalls in sparkling showers down the parched and rugged faces of the precipices, have clothed the thinnest strips of soil with the most luxuriant verdure. The rows of cottages running up the Rock at impossible angles, the lines of semi-detached villas on the Cornice roads, appreciated for the most part by the benedicts of the regiments, are covered with mosses of blossoming foliage. The Alameda, with its crowd of promenaders listening to the milmary delights. If you do not mind a certain publicity, you may breathe love whispers in the bowers of fucusia and myrtle. And the idea of a merry masquerade is kept up by the picturesqueness of the motley groups hotel, where you may think yourself lucky if you have found accommodabrilliant patches of unseasonably color in the glare of the glowing Southern sun. There are Moors from Barbary, and Arabs from Algeria in their flowing burnouses and mowy turbans. There are Jews in their black garments and red fezzes and yellow morocco slippers down at the heel. There are swarthy Spaniards enveloped in leathern leggings and the heavy folds of the everlosting capa, notwithstanding the more than genial warmth, stalking through the crowd with an air as haughtily impassive as that of the Orientals from the other side of the Straite; while among fur-haired German merchants and clive colored Italians swarm the native-bred "Scorpions of the Rock."
